

3 More Arrests Expected Today In Hall Murder

Simpson's sudden apparent cessation of activity.

The action of the police in arresting two and possibly three persons in the Hall-Mills murder will be based on an interview with Mrs. Jane Gibson, the "pig woman," the state's chief witness, according to one of the investigators. She is believed to have put her story of four years ago into the form of a sworn statement which accuses two persons specifically of being at the scene of the crime. Previously, she named a woman in gray and a bushy-haired man as being on the Phillips farm September 14, 1922, the night of the murder.

Eleven witnesses were questioned yesterday, concluding the examinations of the prosecution. At the conference today, the testimony in hand will be gone over carefully and several important decisions are expected.

Among the witnesses questioned was Charlotte Mills, daughter of Mrs. Eleanor Mills, who was murdered with the Rev. E. W. Hall. Miss Mills, who is now 20, asserted that shortly after the crime she was questioned by the late Professor Azariah Beekman and warned to limit her testimony.

Told to Limit Testimony

"There are certain places for girls of your kind when they don't know how to behave," Miss Mills reported the late Mr. Beekman as having told her during an examination in his office.

The girl alleged that she had visited the Hall home after the murder, and that Mrs. Hall, who is now at liberty in $15,000 bail on a charge of murdering her husband and Mrs. Mills, had made an attempt to put her in an institution.

Four physicians who testified, accused and named two officials as thwarting the ends of justice in ordering that an autopsy be dispensed with so that the bodies might be buried speedily.

An important point in the case against Mrs. Hall was scored by Mrs. Marie Lee of 580 West 38th St., Paterson, N. J. Mrs. Lee, a sister of Mrs. Mills, asserted that the woman had lived in constant fear of Mrs. Hall before the murder.

Mrs. Lee charged that Mrs. Hall knew all about the affair between her husband and Mrs. Mills, a point which the rector's widow has always denied.

Rector Wrote Love Poem

At one time, according to Mrs. Lee, she was visiting the Hall home when the rector was writing a love poem to her sister. Mrs. Hall entered the room and the pastor hastily turned the sheet of paper on which he had been writing face down and left. Mrs. Hall looked at the poem, and when her husband returned, quarreled with him.

Mrs. Lee asserted.

"I know the whole affair will end in a great disaster," Mrs. Lee quoted her sister as once having told her.

Mrs. Mary Reinhardt, sister-in-law of Mrs. Mills, told reporters who interrogated her, that she was sure Mrs. Hall had knowledge of the affair. She asserted that Rev. Dr. Hall had bought a bungalow for Mrs. Mills four years before the tragedy took place.

A clue to the identity of the mysterious "woman in orange," on whom Senator Simpson pins so much faith, was given when reporters visited the home of Mrs. Augusta Tennyson, another of Mrs. Mills's sisters. Mrs. Tennyson intimated she had seen the prosecutor without reporters knowing about it, and given him information which he considered very important.

Editor The Graphic.

Permit me to congratulate you upon the editorial on "The demon prosecutor" Simpson which appears in today's issue of your valued newspaper. It is, beyond all question, the finest piece of literature yet presented in the great metropolitan press, in the Hall-Mills tragedy. If I knew the writer of same I would personally send him my congratulations. It was the "best ever."

Cordially yours,

Railmen Confer With Mediators On Wage Boost

No new developments today were reported by executives representing the railroad systems of the East who conferred at length with the new United States Board of Mediation and presented the companies' views regarding the proposed wage increases demanded by the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and the Order of Railroad Conductors.

As was the case on Monday, when the board held its first meeting with spokesmen for the brotherhoods, the proceedings were kept secret.

The executives' position on the new wage demands was set forth fully in a statement issued early last June, following the breakdown of the original negotiations with the brotherhoods. At that time it was contended that, although there has been a steady improvement in Eastern railroad finances each year since 1921, there was nevertheless no justification for granting a wage increase at present.
